

Score Two More For the I. Js.

If there ever was a sick and sore set of boys after a defeat at base ball, Somerset certainly has the right to boast of such. Having defeated, perhaps, a nine from Norwood, or some of Pulaski's other towns of similar dimensions, the Waddle Bros. Nine insisted, begged and pleaded for a chance to wipe the Interior Journal out of existence, believing theirs was the crack nine in those parts. The I. J., composed of business gentlemen, who play for pleasure rather than money, hesitated about going, not wishing to lose the time or make the long and tiresome trip to Somerset, not mentioning the long lay over at Junction City. They finally consented, however, believing they would add two more to their list of winnings and do a good deed by taking down a lutton hole or two, the gentlemen, whose opinions of them selves as players had grown high into the excited. They went, they played, they conquered. But, dear reader, this does not tell the whole story, and injustice would be done the expert "kickers" if we were to stop here. In the first place they claimed, even before the game had begun, that we had put in professional, their grounds for such an assertion being the resemblance some of our men bore to adepts they had either seen or heard of. This absurdity was finally frowned down by the more liberal and courteous members and the game proceeded. Rice and Wilson were the I. J. battery and it was a real sin to see so much labor lost in trying to bat Rice, who made them saw the air till their sides were sore. Wilson, who always plays well, held him beautifully till the eighth inning when he hurt a finger, when he was changed to centre field and Mackin, our other champion catcher, put in his place. All of the boys did nobly and won for themselves another victory by a score of 10 to 6.

The evening game began at 8 o'clock when the Somerset people flocked to the grounds to bet their tin and yell manfully for their pets, believing a redemption and victory lay waiting for them. Another liberal and unbusinesslike, not to say foolish, amount of kicking was done because Bowman, who had played short-stop in the morning, was put in the box, not that he was a better pitcher, but simply to rest Rice. Right here the home club left the grounds, saying they would declare the game off if the pitcher was changed, so exceedingly absurd that even the two ten-year old negro mascots the Stanford boys had taken with them, suggested that the Somerset boys should rend up on base ball or quit the business. Seeing they were growing peevish and fretful, our boys finally yielded to their wishes, thus showing a liberality—synonymous with our gentlemanly players. The game started with Rice and Mackin battery and after a thousand and one kicks on the part of the home club resulted in an easy victory for the I. Js. by a score of 17 to 10.

John Bash umpired impartially and to the entire satisfaction of both sides. None of the unpleasant squabbling or kicking was due to his decisions and we can express our appreciations of his courteous treatment in no stronger terms than saying we are always willing to trust our club in his hands, no matter who the opponents be.

A noticeable feature was the absence of any mention of the "pious" catcher the Waddle Bros. telegraphed for and secured. It would have been a feeble effort had he not played.

The top, which was spoken of, failed to materialize. The boys were no doubt over excited and too worn out to "trip the light fantastic."

The Waddle Bros. will play the I. Js. in a few weeks. God grant our desire that a few of their kickers will be left at home.

The Somerset boys have handsome uniforms and play fairly good ball, but we again assert that the Interior Journal is no clumps by a long shot.

Complimenting Collector Bronston.

At a meeting of representatives of the Internal Revenue force of the 8th Kentucky District the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Hon. T. S. Bronston's term as Collector of this district has this day expired, therefore be it resolved:

1st. That he be tendered the congratulations of his office force and all his subordinates in office, in the 8th Collector's District, for the efficient manner in which he has conducted the intricate affairs of this district, never forgetting for a moment the duties of his office and the great responsibility he had assumed toward the United States Government.

2d. That in him the distillers of this district had always an unprejudiced and legal hearing for any grievance, real or imaginary, which they claimed to have against the United States Government, their papers and cases always receiving special attention before rendering judgment on same.

3d. That we tender him our sincere thanks for the kindness he has manifested and the interest he has taken in our welfare as subordinate officers during his term of office as Collector.

4th. That Hon. A. R. Barnum, the incoming Collector, has our best wishes for his success as Collector and we think him eminently fitted for the position.

5th. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Interior Journal for publication, and that a copy of same be sent to the Hon. T. S. Bronston and Hon. A. R. Barnum.

A Statement From the Manager of the Interior Journals.

To the Editor Interior Journal:
My attention was called to an article in the Somerset Republican in regard to the games of base ball played in that city on the 4th of July between the I. Js. and the Somerset. The writer evidently was not posted as to the make-up of his club. He forgot about his catcher and third baseman. We are sorry that any unkind feeling was engendered. We play ball for the amusement it affords and have not paid a dollar for a hired player this season, although the Republican charges that our nine was composed of professionals from Cincinnati, Louisville and Lebanon. As to the personnel of the I. Js., Tom Rice, pitcher, Leslie Wilson, c., Albert Severance, George Ramsey, Wm. Shanks, Robert Davidson, Joe Emery are all with one exception natives of our city, and have lived here all their lives. The other two are living in Lebanon and can hardly be classed as good amateurs. Can Somerset say as much truthfully? I think not, as the subjoined letter will show. It is intimated by some who profess to know that the editor of the Republican put up his little "roll" on the Somerset, hence his charging that our boys were delighted with their trip and believe that they can repeat the dose to the Somerset and Lexington club on our home grounds. One thing is certain, if we should be defeated you will hear no squealing from the club or the Interior Journal, though defeat is an entire stranger to us thus far this season. I think I am reflecting the sentiments of all fair-minded lovers of the game when I say that just such sore heads as the editor of the Republican who may possibly have lost 50 cents on the game, bring the manly sport into disrepute. The following letter was received from Somerset's "home-talent" catcher.

DEAR SIR:—I drop you this little note to ask you if you won't favor me with a position in your B. B. club the rest of the season on reasonable terms. If you will favor me will you please answer in care of Mrs. Kelley, cor. Spring and Pine streets, Lexington, Ky., and also your terms. Hoping to receive a favorable reply, I remain yours, W. W. LOWE.

—Proctor Knott has at last won a race. He took the Sheridan Stakes from Spokane at Chicago in great shape. The distance was 11 miles, which seems to be the extent of the gelding's capacity.

—I have several black Berkshire sows and females, which I offer for sale as breeders. They will weigh about 60 pounds now, are thoroughbred and are as handsome as anybody's. J. Hain.

—A Georgia farmer prevents his cows from jumping a fence by cutting off their lower eyelashes, making them think the fence is three times as high as it really is. If you cut the upper lashes a reverse illusion will result, he says.

—The first sale of wheat in the county heard of was a crop of 10,000 bushels sold by Hon. John D. Harris to Mr. W. N. Potts of the Stanford Roller Mills, at 75 cents. A lot of 24 fat hogs, averaging 341 pounds, were sold at auction at 4c.—Richmond Register.

—Shipment of Irish potatoes began this week at prices ranging from $1.40 to $1.50 per barrel, and a good many were sold at that figure. Wednesday they took a fall to $1, and now they are quoted at 90 cents and this is what is being paid for good potatoes on hand of ears.—Gallatin, Tenn., paper.

—On the afternoon of the 5th inst., Col. John R. Henderson got into an altercation with a negro on his farm. The colored shot the negro twice, the shots glancing and taking slight effect near the hip bone. Neither wound is serious. The statements of the parties differ very materially. Trial next Thursday.

—The 4th of July passed off quietly and peacefully until about 6 o'clock in the afternoon. At that hour William Best, drunk, of course, got into a difficulty with city marshal J. L. Hamilton. The former was knocked down and pounded a little. Hamilton's friends pulled him off of Best, but after the latter recovered his feet there was a sort of moving fight for some 20 or 30 yards, Willie never getting in a lick. Best finally tying of the town he off would have painted red, shook the dust from his feet with commendable zeal and an uncomparable determination, and departed with Spokane speed towards the abiding place of his kindred.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

—Rev. John A. Bogle is dead! It is with peculiar sadness that we write these words. Fifteen years ago, when the writer came to this county, one of the first men to render timely and valued assistance in his undertaking was the kind old gentleman who Friday night received the long-desired summons to come up higher. The kindness began at the first acquaintance continued until the day of his death and neither the writer nor the paper ever had a warmer, truer friend. Associated with him all the time, for some of it very intimately, we learned to love him for his bigness of heart and broadness of brain, and to-day we grieve to think that we shall no more clasp his hand and receive the kindly word of encouragement and praise he nearly always had for us. Endowed naturally with a bright mind, it had been thoroughly cultivated and with his keen, Irish wit, he was a most entertaining conversationalist, as he was preacher of a very high order of talent.

Born in Mason county, Ky., a few weeks after the arrival of his parents from Ireland, in 1816, he barely missed being an Irishman himself, as he used to say when asked about his early history. He attended college at Oxford, O., and previous to entering Centre College in 1840, served as clerk in a store in New Albany, Ind., for two years. He graduated with the highest honors of his class in 1843 and after teaching a year in the preparatory department of the same college, he went to Princeton and graduated in the Theological Seminary in 1847.

His first pastoral charge was the Hustonville Presbyterian church, which he served for 27 years, when he retired from the active ministry. He was twice married, first to Miss Nannie Cowan, a sister of Mrs. George D. Barnes, who lived but little over a year, leaving a son, Mr. Jno. C. Bogle, now a physician of high standing at Danville. His second wife, Miss Cloe Masterson, to whom he was united in 1851, and she with five children survive him—Mrs. Lucy Hays, W. M. Bogle and Misses Belle, Kate and Lizzie Bogle. Mrs. Hays, who lives in Kansas, owing to the suddenness of the death could not arrive in time to pay the last mournful tribute, but the son, who lives in Clarksville, Tenn., arrived on the day of the funeral, which occurred Sunday afternoon, after a sermon at the residence by Rev. Mr. Bruce. The Masons, of which fraternity Mr. Bogle had for years reached the highest order, took charge of the body and the local lodge augmented by members from Harrodsburg, Danville, Stanford, McKinney, and other lodges, made an imposing procession to the tomb. The crowd was the largest nearly ever seen in Hustonville on a similar occasion and there was general and deep regret expressed on every hand.

The immediate cause of the death was brain fever, superinduced by getting wet after severe exercise, and he was down only from Tuesday to Friday. His health had been poor for several years, and while he was for the most part a burden to him and caused him to long to be at rest, he was always cheerful and ready to make some witty or amusing remark. At the time of his death he was serving his second term as superintendent of public schools, to which position he had been elected by such a majority as did his best good, for it showed the highest esteem in which he was held. Though passed threescore and ten, he labored with all his might for the cause and did much to improve and exalt the character of teaching and teachers in this county. A ripe scholar and a thorough student of his subjects, his sermons were always very superior productions, and but for a rather faulty delivery, he would have ranked with the most noted pulpits of his day. A kindlier, better heart never beat in human breast than the one now still forever, and having fought the good fight, finished the course and kept the faith, there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give. May all he loved on earth receive alike reward and join him at last to sing forever the praises of the great Redeemer.

—Len H. Taylor died at Hustonville Friday night of bladder trouble, after an illness of a few days. He was a brother of Mr. James H. Taylor and was on a visit to him when his death occurred. Mr. Taylor was in his 23d year; was an exceedingly clever and good-hearted young man and his legion of friends at Hustonville and Bradfordsville, his home, are pained at his untimely death. His remains were taken to Danville on Sunday morning for interment and a large number were present to witness the body laid away forever.

—Mr. Charles DePauw, a brother of Mr. M. N. DePauw and an uncle of Capt. B. F. Powell's wife, died at the latter's home Saturday. He had long been a sufferer from rheumatism, which finally caused his death. His age was about 70 years.

—An infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Moore died Saturday.

Call for Committee Meeting.

The members of the democratic county committee are urgently requested to meet at my office in Stanford, Saturday, July 13th, at 2 o'clock, to consider matters of great importance to the party.

T. D. NEWLAND, Ch'n.

MADISON COUNTY usually asks for all in sight and gets it too. But at the Senatorial Convention at Mt. Vernon she was as modest as a maid of 16 and asked for nothing, but got there all the same in good shape. The district is composed of the counties of Madison, Estill and Rockcastle and Madison having held the position for three years either by democratic or republican, said to the other counties that they must settle the nomination themselves. Estill put up a man and so did Rockcastle, the latter in the person of Tom Jim Ballard. Madison refused to vote between them, but assured both that no matter which was agreed upon she would give the nominee her warmest support. There was a conference then between the delegates from Estill and Rockcastle and after a full and fair discussion of the situation, they agreed to withdraw their candidates and present the name of Hon. A. T. Chenault, of Madison, for the nomination. It was done and Mr. Chenault was made the nominee in less time than it takes to tell it. He accepted, the other candidates acquiesced and promised him a cordial support and the convention adjourned in the best of humor, resolved to elect Mr. Chenault, although the district went republican last time by a good majority. The nominee is an excellent man and is fully equipped for legislative work, by having served in the last general assembly from Madison with credit to himself and county.

THE republicans have at last nominated a man for treasurer who will run—Hon. D. G. Colson, of Bell, the present member of the legislature from that county. He is about 27 years of age and is quite a good lawyer with some abilities as an orator. During the last session of the legislature he tried to make some reputation as a filibuster and succeeded fairly well. While clerk in one of the departments at Washington he wore off the wirey edge of the mountaineer and now looks more like a city dude than a Bell county warrior. He has made some $50,000 out of the rise in lands and it is possible that this acquisition of filthy lucre had much to do with his nomination.

HIGHLY complimentary resolutions, adopted by the revenue officials and distillers with regard to the excellent management of the collector's office by Col. T. S. Bronston, appear in this issue. They are moreover fully deserved, for Col. Bronston has made a most capable and courteous officer and retires with the respect of all who have had dealings with him. His office was in capital shape for turning over to his successor, who finds the accounts balanced to a cent and everything easy to comprehend.

WE can shake with Bro. McCarty, of the Jessamine Journal, on this proposition: "The Journal does not rejoice over the defeat of prohibition in States or counties where the question comes upon its merits. It is the friend and advocate of temperance, and is for any sensible, practical measure for the spread of temperance principles. But where the cause of temperance is allied with Woman's Rights and accompanied by efforts to break down the democratic party, this paper is not for it."

GEN. FRY seems to be playing in bad luck this season. Young Mr. McKee beat him for city attorney of Danville recently and Colson did him up for State treasurer. Either Landrum or Kereing will do the same for him in the pension agency, but even then he will not be a subject for pity. He can live like a lord on the $100 a month he gets from the government for being deaf and snap his finger in derision at the youngsters who have distanced him.

THE examining trial of Will Showers for the murder of his young wife, at Elizabethtown, resulted in his being held in $2,500 bail to answer to the grand jury. The proof showed that he is responsible for her death, if not by actual murder, by driving her to suicide by his drunken conduct, more likely by the former method.

WINCHESTER voted 105 majority against water works Friday. If this means that she is going to give the press boys something better than water next year, it is all right so far as we are concerned, but it looks like a very short-sighted policy for a growing town that claims a boom.

JOHN W. YERKES presided over the republican committee at Lexington with the ease and dignity of a veteran. It is a pity such a fine fellow trains with such a crowd.

—Dr. Hourigan, who murdered his brother-in-law at Riley's because he dunned him for a $4 store account, was given a life sentence at Campbellsville, to which place the case had been taken from Marion county.

The prize fight between Sullivan and Kilrain, set for yesterday morning, at a point within 200 miles of New Orleans, has created even more excitement than the noted Heenan and Sayres fight some 30 years ago. The newspapers are filled with the movements of the human animals, who were to beat each other out of all semblance to mankind and every detail of the meet is read with interest even by those who oppose the brutal exhibition. Bets were strong on Sullivan, who is described as the most magnificently developed human animal on earth. His powers of endurance are demonstrated by the fact that he skips a rope a thousand consecutive times without any apparent fatigue, and that he tosses a 25 pound ball 40 minutes without stopping. Kilrain is the more gentlemanly of the two and relies as much on generalship as he does on muscle. The British character of Sullivan is shown in the following choice outburst, when he was told that Kilrain said he was sure to whip him: "That stiff whip me! Why, he won't know he is in it. I hate him and his whole gang, and I will do my best to kill him. He challenged me when I had a broken arm. He challenged me again when I had the fever. Again, the cur flouted his dirty shirt in my face when I was on crutches. I have it in for him and I will knock his d—d dirty head off as soon as we get in the ring."

Sullivan Gets There.

Special Dispatch to the Interior Journal.
LOUISVILLE, July 8, 3 P. M.—Fight began at 9:30 this morning and lasted till 1:10, Sullivan winning in the 72d round.
E. G. LOGAN.

THE most heartless scoundrel that the last few days have developed is William Hale, of Daviess county. After seducing a beautiful young girl under promise of marriage, he refused to stand to his agreement and when the poor thing begged him piteously to save her from the disgrace of illegitimate motherhood, he coolly told her the best plan was to poison herself, at the same time procuring and handing her a dicker's worth of strychnine, which she took in despair. A doctor arrived in time to save her life and Hale at once disappeared. If he were hunted down and made to ornament a limb of a tree, his punishment would even then be far less than his crime deserves.

AT Mt. Salem Saturday Mr. Warren asked Bro. Montgomery the direct question, "How will you vote for U. S. Senator if elected?" "For a prohibitionist first, last and all the time, and if I can't get one to vote for, will vote for the man who comes nearest to filling the bill." We have no idea that Bro. M. will ever have the privilege of casting a vote for Senator, but his answer should be enough to bring every democrat, who has been thinking of voting for him, to his senses. The so-called prohibition party is in direct opposition to the democratic party as the republican party is and the vote for one is as bad as the other.

WE rise to make the merciful honorable to Tom Jim Ballard, of Rockcastle. Judging him alone from his letter published in a Richmond paper, which looked very much like a stab and a threat at the party, we were inclined to think he needed a little discipline, but he evidently did not mean all he said, for he not only acquiesced in the nomination of Hon. A. T. Chenault for Senator, but promised him his cordial support in the canvass. There are no lies on Tom Jim. He's all right.

LOUIS TANNER has been figuring on the annual cost of the service pension proposed by the Ohio republican platform and finds that it foots up $720,000,000. He therefore thinks it is too soon to propose it for a law, but as he has been an advocate of the monster steal, he is at a loss to know how he shall get out of recommending it to Congress. Die out of it, old fellow, die out of it if no other way.

THE Reform preachers in this county, or at least several of them, seem disposed to give up their golly calling to wallow in the mud and mire of politics. Well, there is no accounting for tastes, but we are glad to observe that the tastes of the preachers of the other denominations do not run that way.

WE knew that Emmett Logan was writing the headlines of the Louisville Times now, but had no idea he had to set them too. Saturday's paper, though, shows that he does, and that he dishes into the hell box at random for his type. The work was fearfully and wonderfully done.

MEN should not mix their politics and religion. It has the effect of spoiling both and of making a poor citizen a worse christian.

THE Kentucky Legislature, composed almost entirely of democrats, passed the following law, May 17th, 1886. It is about as good a prohibition enactment as one could wish. See General Statutes, page 1,047.

All licenses to sell by retail, spirituous, vinous or malt liquors, shall be granted by the county courts, but said courts shall not grant a license to sell spirituous, vinous or malt liquors until ten days' notice shall be given by posting a written or printed notice at the door of the court-house, and at least four public places in the neighborhood where the liquor is to be sold; and if the majority of the legal voters in the neighborhood shall protest against the application, it shall be refused. The county court in each instance shall determine what constitutes the neighborhood.

The Race For the Legislature.

One issue between Messrs. Warren and Montgomery seems now too clear for dispute. The latter maintains that if a law has once been adopted and he approves it, there shall never, under any altered state of case or of public opinion, be any revision or repeal of that law; in plain words that a majority ought not to rule. The former holds that the people are sovereign and that the voice of a majority, whether right or wrong, whether speaking wisely or foolishly, is and must be the law. The question of prohibition is not at all in issue except in so far as Mr. Warren contends that it should be left to the people concerned, while Mr. Montgomery is of the opinion that it should be left to him. That this is a clear-cut and absolutely fair statement of their respective positions has been demonstrated both in these columns and by their own utterances on the stump, and so clearly that he who doubts, disputes or misrepresents it in the future, proclaims himself to be deficient either in candor or in intelligence.

But there are other issues involved, of which the people should not lose sight. Mr. Montgomery is not an independent candidate running for office upon a moral question. He belongs to a distinct and aggressive political party which has certain well-defined and publicly announced purposes in view. He is not only a member of this party, but he is its officially accredited champion, standing on its platform of principles, believing in them and pledged to carry them into effect. There is something in this meat-bag besides the prohibition mouse. May 31, 1888, the National Convention of this party, in the 9th pluck of its platform proclaimed:

"That the right of suffrage rests on no mere accident of race, color, sex or nationality, and that where, from any cause, it has been withheld from citizens who are of suitable age and mentally and morally qualified for the exercise of an intelligent ballot, it should be restored by the people through the LEGISLATURES of the several States on such rights as they may deem wise."

This was reaffirmed at the State Convention at Louisville, and it is a part of that party's faith and purpose to-day, as we challenge their candidate to deny. It means Woman's Suffrage, whether she wants it or not; it means an educational qualification for the ballot. These are startling doctrines in this latitude. We had heard, heretofore, that these and similar isms are being preached by sundry unfrocked priests and unsexed women of New England, but never dreamed of their obtaining foothold or consideration in Kentucky. Since, however, they seem, in some small degree, to have done so, let's take a moment's look at them.

It is proposed in the first place by Mr. Montgomery and his party, not merely to confer on woman the right to vote, but to impose upon her the duty to do so, for it is even more a duty than a right, and not only that, but to impose upon her the correlative duty to hold office. Omitting other considerations, it ought to be sufficient to say that the women of Kentucky don't want to vote. If any one doubts it let him ask his wife, mother or sister. Even if they did want to do so, it would be the wisest wish formed by their sex since Eve craved the apple. Woman, as it is, and in her own appropriate sphere—the tramping, the tender, the beautiful domain of home—is an enthroned and undisputed queen. Here, in this widest and noblest arena of all the world, her power is absolute, her sway resistless. She does not make laws, but she makes honest men and pure women. She does not build party platforms to regulate the State, but she builds an altar in every hearthstone and ministers at it, the gracious priestess of every virtue which makes the State possible. From this pedestal, where she has been placed of her own choice and by the love and loyalty of man, the prohibition party would hurl her into the mephitic abyss of practical politics and make of her—a voter! Renounce a throne, my dear madam, they say, in order that you may be elected constable or even, perchance, a justice of the peace. The Christian view of marriage, as taught in Holy Writ, that it is a sacrament, that man and wife are one, that the wife shall be subject to her husband, is entirely obsolete now, and only held by "whisky men" and friends of the saloon. The wife, under our new dispensation, is simply the equal business partner of her husband in a breeding establishment, and may get the better of him if she can. Assert your rights, my sister, come to the ward caucuses to be instructed in them. The only sure test and proof of your independence will be that you differ from your husband. Argue with him, rant at him, set the children against him, convince or bully him if you can; if you can't, arm your colored cook to the polls and doubly kill his vote. How do the men and women of this snail and conservative old country like the prospect?

The other proposition, to restrict suffrage to those who have a certain amount of text-book learning—for that is the meaning of an educational qualification—is scarcely less crazy and even more impracticable. Indeed this idea, until taken up by the new party, was ages ago abandoned by all created beings except a few venerable school-marmms, who over their ten, in secluded villages were wont to discuss this point and abuse their neighbors. In a government based on the idea that "all men are free and equal," what conceivable right has the more or less educated A. to make laws for the more or less uneducated B? The sole functions of government, as all men but political persons know, is to protect the three natural rights of life, liberty and property. One needn't be a college graduate, nor even know how to read, in order to appreciate the value of these rights nor to think clearly and justly on the best methods of preserving them. Untutored common sense, sharpened by self-interest, gives to the illiterate as keen, and often a keener, insight into these matters, than is possessed by the learned doctrinaire. In truth, manhood suffrage, or the right of every man, no matter what his condition, to have an equal voice in the legislation which is to govern him, is the only possible policy in a popular government, and it is as firmly imbedded in American institutions as those lovely young ladies, Misses Emma and Helen Santley, of whom Stanford is justly proud, left yesterday for Wyoming. If their visit was half as enjoyable to them as it proved to their friends, they were amply repaid for the long journey in making it.

Those lovely young ladies, Misses Emma and Helen Santley, of whom Stanford is justly proud, left yesterday for Wyoming. If their visit was half as enjoyable to them as it proved to their friends, they were amply repaid for the long journey in making it.

Those lovely young ladies, Misses Emma and Helen Santley, of whom Stanford is justly proud, left yesterday for Wyoming. If their visit was half as enjoyable to them as it proved to their friends, they were amply repaid for the long journey in making it.

The cold-water orators are fond of impassioned apostrophes to home and country. We deliberately affirm that no surer means of polluting and destroying both could be devised by the enemy of mankind than these two propositions embodied in a single resolution of their own platform. We charge that Mr. Montgomery is a staunch believer in them. We charge that if he should go to the legislature, it would be his bounden duty as an honest man to introduce and press to their passage two bills at least, one setting up an educational qualification for the ballot, the other forcing upon the women, black and white, the deadly gift of suffrage. How many will there be, even under rigorous church process, who will barter their democratic birthright of glory for this wretched mess of pottage—for this devil's broth of eternal water, irreligion and lunacy?

In the meantime we feel to remark, the democratic Sanjak-Sheriff unlocked its folds to the upper air, the brave old battle-flag of the people, which has led them in every fight for a century, and which, though often meeting disaster, has never known disgrace or surrender. Beneath it, and in exact alignment with it stands our gallant leader, made so by the unsolicited and unanimous choice of the party, an able, honest and courageous man, a Christian without cant and a gentleman without stain. Gentlemen of the democratic party in Lincoln, can you hesitate a moment as to where duty and loyalty call you?

Advice to a Young Man.
So you were a little too pert, and spoke without thinking, did you, my son? And you got picked up right suddenly on your statement, eh? Oh, well, that's all right; that happens to older men than you every day. I have noticed that you have a very positive way of filling a decision where other men state an opinion, and you frequently make a positive assertion where older men merely express a belief. But never mind; you are young. You will know less as you grow older. "Don't I mean you will know more?" Heaven forbid, my boy. No, indeed; I mean that you will know less. You will never know more than you do now; never.

If you live to be ten thousand years old, you will never again know so much as you do now. No hoary-headed sage, whose long and studious years were spent in reading men and books, ever knew so much as a boy of your age. A girl of 15 knows about as much, but then she gets over it sooner and more easily. "Does it cause a pang, then, to get rid of early knowledge?" Ah, my boy, it does. Pulling eye teeth and molars will seem like pleasant recreation alongside of shredding off great solid slabs and layers of wisdom and knowledge that now press upon you like geological strata. "But how are you to get rid of all this superincumbent wisdom?" Oh, easily enough, my boy; just keep on nailing it; that's the best way. It won't stand constant use, and it disintegrates rapidly on exposure to air.—Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

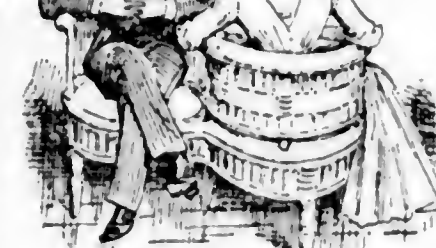

The Ethics of the Profession Forbade.
"You have saved my boy's life!" exclaimed the grateful father, with glistening eyes, as he grasped the hand of the dripping man. "It was a brave, noble act, and I can never forget it. Willie might have drowned if you had not gone to his relief. And now, will you tell me to whom I am indebted for this?"

"Why, papa," interrupted Willie, "don't you know Dr. Pluggum? He's in the same business you're in. Don't you remember the man that has that great big advertisement of 'Tooth Extracted Without Pain—Full Sets, Upper and Lower, Only $30!' in The Afternoon Tomahawk?"

"Ah, yes," said Dr. Fillem, D. D. S. "I am sincerely grateful to you—ah—Mr. Pluggum; deeply and sincerely grateful. Come, Willie."

"Why didn't you call him Dr. Pluggum, papa?" inquired Willie, as they rode homeward.

"It wouldn't do, my son," replied his father. "It is contrary to the ethics of the profession. He is a brave man and a noble fellow, but he isn't a doctor. He advertises, my son."—Chicago Tribune.

The Professor in the Ball Room.

Making Good Use of the Resemblance.
P. T. Barnum (surprised and indignant)—You here in Metropolis, Mr. Forpangh, while my circus is in town? Do you call this sticking to the agreement? I thought we were to remain out of each other's territory during the entire season, sir.

P. T. Barnum (profusely apologetic)—I sincerely beg your pardon, Mr. Forpangh. I see, now, etc.—Chicago Tribune.

Confiding.
A Chicago gambler whose first name was George used to visit a Chinaman's establishment and smoke opium almost daily. One day he rushed into the place and said excitedly: "Hup, ban me $10. Thanks. I'll come in and pay you tomorrow noon, if I'm alive," and out he went with the money. About 3 o'clock the next afternoon a friend of the gambler dropped in on the Chinaman and said: "Hup, where is George today?" and the confiding Celestial wiped his eye with the corner of his handkerchief and replied: "George, him dead."—Boston Globe.

He Wanted Large Letters.
An Austin man went to a marble shop to order a tombstone for his brother who had died.

"Do you wish large or small letters upon the stone?" asked the man of tombstones.

"Oh, large, by all means; my brother was very nearsighted," was the reply.—Texas Siftings.

Nambly—I'd rather you wouldn't, Miss Loutene. This is the anniversary of my dear brother's death.—Yankee Blade Epoch.

A Youthful Suggestion.
Some time ago, when a gentleman of Buckport, Me., was married, he took his bride on a visit to her people at Ellsworth. In the afternoon he had petted a little nephew and showed him his false teeth, with which the little fellow was much amused. In the evening, when the company was assembled, the conversation lagged, and some one said: "What shall we do next?" The little boy spoke up and said: "Show 'em your false teeth, Uncle Al!"

Willing to Help Himself.

Traveler—Don't you see my hands are full and I can't get at my pockets? Solicitor—I didn't intend to discommodate you, sir, when I spoke to you. If you will tell me where you keep your money, I can find it myself.—Life.

Too Late Even for Leeches.
A gentleman here who was "burglarized" about two years ago reported his loss to the detectives and offered naturally to assist them in every way. At first he called frequently to ascertain if any news of the thieves had been obtained, but being met always with a negative his visits became infrequent and finally ceased. He had forgotten the matter altogether till recently, when he was called upon by one of the detectives, who stated:

"We have got a clew."

"That is good. Is it a promising one?"

"Certainly. We have discovered the thief."

"Better still. You have him arrested?"

"We can't do that. It's too late."

"How is that?"

"He died last week, confessing to the robbery."

"It's a grand thing to get a clew.—Denver News.

Nothing Is Old Since the Flood.
A magazine article talks of "The Lack of Old Homes in America." It is a great pity. Things of this sort always impress us very deeply. A few weeks ago we visited a Sunday school, and the tears filled our eyes as we noticed the great scarcity of old men in the infant class. We looked over the rows of little children, all of them under 6 years of age, and not one white-haired old man in all the class could we see. There was one bald-headed, toothless fellow there, but he was sitting in his sister's lap, chewing a rubber ring, and singing a song all by himself, the refrain of which was "Ah, goo, ah, goo." Yes, indeed, there are few old men in the infant class. Some way with the kindergarten. It's a wonder some wise magazine writer hasn't noticed this singular fact and made an article about it.—Burdette in Brooklyn Eagle.

A Point Usually Overlooked.
The youthful heir to a Walnut Hills ancestral establishment is of an inquiring turn of mind and directs his attention especially to the elucidation of religious problems. Last week he heard a Sunday school address on "The Prodigal Son." Just what the small boy thought of the address his father was curious to learn, and so he said to him that night at supper: "My son, tell me which of the characters in the parables of the prodigal son you sympathized with?" "Well, papa," replied the cherub with perfect nonchalance, "I think I'd feel disposed to sympathize with the calf."—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Hopeloss Ignorance.
A young society man, well up in languages, was approached by a friend with a copy of a paper in Arabic. "Just read that for me, will you, Jim?"

"You don't understand it, do you?" said Jim.

"No."

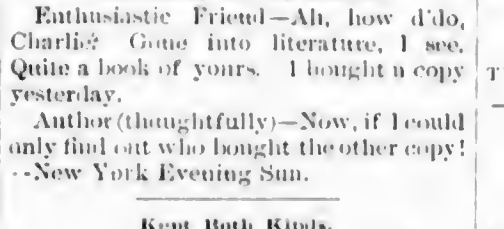

"Well, then, you would not understand it if I read it to you," and assuming an air of crushing superiority, Jim walked away.—Texas Siftings.

To Remember Him By.
A young man of Americans had his picture taken Tuesday, also one of his pointer dog. Then he called on a young lady, presented the pictures, and asked her to take her choice. She selected the picture of the dog, and remarked that she would look at it and think of him.—Americans (Boston) Recorder.
